DICK CULLEN.

BEATS UNHOLZ FAIR ON POINTS

REFEREE GIVES GO AS DRAW—BAD DECISION

Although outfought, outgeneraled, and outclassed, even at infighting, Dick Cullen stood in the center of the ring at the stadium last night at the conclusion of his contest with Unholz, and had the cool of frontery to appear disappointed. But apart from that feigned look Unholz was a sorry-looking object. He had been beaten all over the ring through fifteen of the twenty rounds fought, and bore unmistakable signs of what he had been put through. On the other hand, Cullen, apart from a slight discoloration of the nose, escaped unscathed. And that notwithstanding that at no time did he decline an invitation to rally, and that he was always there when there was anything doing. The faster Unholz desired to make it the better pleased was Cullen. He crowded him during the greater portion of the time, and outpointed him at every department of the game taken up. But in keeping with the custom which seems to have grown up of late, the decision given by Referee "Snowy" Baker was a wrong one. During the last three or four rounds it was clear to almost every individual around the ring that Unholz required to administer a knock-out to save him from defeat. Not only did he not land that punch, but he failed to improve on his showing of the previous rounds. When they finally shook hands the margin between the pair was so wide that even the uninitiated must have been able to choose the winner. During fifteen out of the twenty rounds Cullen was on top, and there should not have been the slightest hesitation on the part of the referee in declaring in his favor. But after having put up what was probably the hardest and one of the best battles of his career, Cullen had the keen disappointment of having to listen to a declaration that he had finished up on equal terms with his opponent.

Cullen, who weighed 9st. 12lb., and had the advantage of 5lb. in weight, did not show to advantage immediately. He appeared to be suffering from stage-fright, with the result that for three rounds Unholz's star was in the ascendant. The tenth and thirteenth rounds were the only others in which "the Boer" was on top. When Cullen threw off his nervousness and warmed up to his work he fought splendidly, with the result that those who went to scoff him came away loudly praising him. Nobody expected anything wonderful of him. On his display against Frank Thorn he was put down as about the poorest sample of boxer ever sent from the United States to Australia. He neither boxed nor fought, but last night he excelled in both departments. While he boxed, Unholz simply "ate his left." During the periods in which they mixed things he more than held his own. Unholz certainly did the most punching on those occasions, but nine out of ten of his blows landed on a protecting glove. Every now and then Cullen came out of his Meeghanlike smother, and then Unholz always felt a stinging blow on the jaw. At infighting, a considerable amount of which was indulged in, Cullen was also on top. He always held his opponent safe, and in breaking away from the clinches almost invariably swung one of his hands heavily to the side of the head. Unholz, however, was always willing and anxious to be up and doing. Notwithstanding the punishment he received he was always up to the scratch and ready to mix things. From the fourteenth round onwards he realized that he required a knock-out to win, and get about the task with a determination that must have been admired. But Cullen was always on hand with something carrying steady power, and consequently Unholz was unable to accomplish his object. Notwithstanding the pace he maintained throughout, Cullen was much stronger than his opponent at the finish. This was particularly evident during the last two rounds, when he handled his man comfortably, and on three occasions almost sent him off his feet with a heavy left to the jaw. Cullen fought coolly, determinedly, and with beautiful judgment, and was particularly untucky in being deprived of such a hard fight.

STARS BOARD OF MARAMA

BOB FITZSIMMONS WAS GROUCHY AND SNAPPY

As soon as the Marama was sighted yesterday afternoon, a deputation of sports and newspaper men made for the waterfront and quickly boarded launches that conveyed them out to the C-A boat.

Upon reaching the side of the liner, Tommy Burns, Bob Fitzsimmons and Bill Lang were quickly picked out. The trio were leaning over the rail and gazing at the city. When the newspaper men got on board, a rush was made for the famous boxers, and soon everybody was talking. Burns did not have much to say, but was pleased to hear that arrangements had been made for a show in Honolulu. "Yes, we will go in to San Francisco tomorrow," said Burns in reply to a question. "We want to be in plenty of time for the big fight." Upon learning that the Jeffries-Johnson contest had been stopped, as far as San Francisco was concerned, Burns and party were thunderstruck.

Bill Lang was disgusted to hear of the change in the plans of the big fight and he remarked: "Why didn't they arrange to have the fight in Australia? There would have been no trouble, and the purse could have been just as large."

Tommy Burns has a brother on board the boat, and he is just a smaller edition of the ex-champion. The lad, of course, takes the greatest interest in the fight game, and appears to think that Tommy would have a chance against Johnson if matched with him again.

W. Corbett, the best sporting writer in Australasia, was also on board the Marama. He is looked upon as the W. W. Naughton of the Antipodes, and his work in the Sydney Referee has attracted the attention of the world. Corbett is going through to write up the big fight for his paper. He is well known to all the big sporting men of the world, and is a very genial man.

Old Bob Fitzsimmons was lounging along the steamer rail when approached by the sporting scribes. The old Timaru blacksmith looks about thirty-five years of age, and he certainly wears well. He had a grouchy on and was peeved at everything. On hearing that he was not supposed to be on board the Marama, a cable having been received cancelling his reserved stateroom on the Wilhelmina, Bob became annoyed. "What are they giving me?" he snarled: "Why, I was billed for Brisbane, Suva and here to perform."

Robert was very snappy, and it was easy to see that he and the rest of the bunch of sports were at outs. Fitz continued his passage to Vancouver last night. He was around town early in the afternoon, but went down on board the Marama at 7 o'clock and never showed up again. Billy Woods, who fought Fitz years ago, was looking for the one-time world's champion, but there was nothing doing, as Bob had gone to sleep.

Hugh McIntosh was a busy man from the moment Jack Scully boarded the Marama, and the two managers got together and started to talk over things in connection with the show. There was trouble from the start, as Burns and Lang had no idea of going fifteen rounds. In fact, McIntosh wanted the men to box only four rounds. Scully would not hear of that, as he had advertised that the go was to be for fifteen rounds, and he did not want to break faith with his hundreds of friends and patrons.

Eventually it was arranged that Burns and Lang should go six rounds and that Burns should also have a three-round bout with a sailor off the Cleveland. There was much heated argument before an agreement was come to, and at one time it looked as if Scully would throw up the whole proposition. However, the show came off, and everybody was satisfied and all know that Jack Scully is in no way to blame for the cutting down of the number of rounds. And, anyhow, it would have been very dreary to have sat down and watched Lang and Burns fool around for fifteen two-minute spells of boxing.

Boer Unholz was expected to be on board the Marama, but although Mrs. Unholz was a passenger, there was no sign of the Boer. Dick Cullen did not come, either, but he wrote a letter to the Bulletin saying that he would probably be along next steamer.

The sporting bunch on the Marama had a good time in town, and most of them put up at the Young Hotel for some hours. Burns talked more there, and his version of the fight with Jack Johnson in 1908 was amusing to listen to. Tommy declares that he was not all in when the fight was stopped and the decision given to Johnson. He has another guess coming, however, as everybody who saw the fight knows that Burns did not have a chance against the huge negro.

Burns, McIntosh, Lang and party left for San Francisco on the Wilhelmina this morning, and they will at once proceed to Reno, Nev., where the Jeffries-Johnson fight is to take place. Burns says that he will challenge the winner of the big fight, but if Jeffries wins, there will be no acceptance; and if Johnson is the victor, Burns had better keep out of the ring.

An all Military baseball nine will play the Waseda later on in the season, and a great game should eventuate.
